I am sorry, Obama tells GMA

Re John L. Loring, president

NEW YORK CITY (AP)—Presidential pick Sen. Barack Obama was declared Maryland's latest winner at Tuesday's caucus, but he is not yet sure he will win the state's electoral votes.

the system will not be as "flexible" and that it will be harder to open up new programs. I am worried about giving up the latter, but I believe that the benefits of having an overall engineering framework are worth the price. —David H. Jones, IBM Research Division, Yorktown Heights, NY

On June 10, the publisher of the New York Times, Arthur Hays Sulzberger, Jr., said in an editorial that the paper would not publish any more of the letters. "We are not a platform for the expression of ill-considered and ill-informed views," he said. "We are a forum for the expression of well-considered and well-informed views."

The editorial was widely reprinted. It was a turning point in the paper's history. "The paper was not a platform for the expression of ill-considered and ill-informed views," he said. "We are a forum for the expression of well-considered and well-informed views."

Spokane Journal

The Spokane Journal was a daily newspaper in Spokane, Washington. It was founded in 1890 and was one of the largest newspapers in the Pacific Northwest. It was owned by the Journal Company, which was founded by John D. Rockefeller. The paper was known for its editorial independence and its commitment to the public interest. It was a leading voice in the region and was widely respected. It was a major force in the development of the Pacific Northwest and was a key player in the region's history. And, as I noted in a testimony in December 1992, "because of its temporary and discretionary nature, private sources and [National Trusts] is the National Trusts."

The authors indicate that, given all conditions of the 1990s, the economy was poised for a renaissance of growth.

The strategy was aimed at a renaissance of growth by increasing investment in infrastructure, education, health care, and housing. The key to success, they argue, was the ability to attract foreign investment and technology to the country.

Hyperinflation

Hyperinflation was not a new phenomenon in Latin America. In the 1970s, it had been a major problem in Argentina, Brazil, and Chile. The authors argue that the hyperinflation of the 1990s was a result of the same factors that had caused it in the 1970s.

The researchers in Germany's largest bank found that roughly 20% of the bank's customers are "active" and generate enough revenue to pay for the bank's services. The remaining 80% are "passive" and do not generate enough revenue to pay for the bank's services. The researchers found that the "active" customers are more likely to be younger, more educated, and more affluent than the "passive" customers. They also found that the "active" customers are more likely to use the bank's services, such as checking accounts, credit cards, and investments. The researchers suggest that banks should focus on attracting and retaining "active" customers, as they are the ones who generate the most revenue. They also suggest that banks should find ways to engage "passive" customers, as they represent a large potential market.

Here's why pupil test scores improved

By Maria Corales

THE REASON WHY PUPILS' test scores improved in the recent international assessment is the more rigorous training they received, according to a study by the Department of Education (DepEd).

"We analyzed the improvement made in the scores and observed that the more rigorous training and the more rigorous assessment were the key factors behind the improvement," said DepEd Secretary Armin Luistro.

Luistro said the study "helped us to understand why some schools are performing better than others. It also helped us to identify the factors that are contributing to the improvement in scores."

DepEd also reported that the study was the first time that the results were made available to the public.

The study also found that the more rigorous training and the more rigorous assessment were the key factors behind the improvement in scores.

Planes rouse, thrill remote, sleepy town

(Manila file)

When the Boeing 747-400 landed at the small, remote airport of Zamboanga City, it was a sight to behold. The plane, which arrived from Manila, was the first of its kind to land at the airport. The plane was a Boeing 747-400, which is the largest passenger jet in the world. It was a sight to behold for the people of Zamboanga City, who have never seen a plane of this size before. MICRO-HYDRO-ELECTRIC PLANT

Tano and the Dragonfly of Capintalan

By Melissa Gomez

Sitting on the edge of a small, concrete dam, Tano, a young man with a wide smile, looks down at the water. He is wearing a white t-shirt and a black cap. The dam is part of a micro-hydroelectric plant in Capintalan, a small town in the Cordillera region. Tano is the son of the owner of the plant, and he is helping him with the daily operations. The plant is a small-scale project that generates electricity for the town. It is a good example of how micro-hydroelectric power can be used to provide electricity to remote areas.

Saving an indigenous variety of rice

By [Name] [Location]

Saving an indigenous variety of rice is the goal of a project in the Philippines. The project is part of a larger effort to preserve the genetic diversity of rice in the region. The project is led by a team of scientists from the International Rice Research Institute (IRRI) and the Philippine Department of Agriculture. The project is currently in its early stages, but it has already received a lot of attention from the public and the media.

Proud son of obscure barrio now living American Dream

By Christine E. Sison

ALIWAN BALAGUE, the 34-year-old son of a poor, rural family from a small town in the Philippines, is now a successful businessman in the United States. He is a proud son of his country, and his success is a testament to the American Dream.

Balague, who is now a resident of Los Angeles, California, has built a successful career in the technology industry. He is the founder and CEO of a software development company, and his company has grown from a small startup to a major player in the market.

Balague's success is a testament to the American Dream, which is the belief that anyone can achieve success and prosperity in the United States. He is a proud son of his country, and his success is a testament to the American Dream.

US urges Nokor to give up all A-bombs

WASHINGTON, April 9 (AP) — The United States urged Cambodia to give up all its atomic weapons and to allow international inspectors to verify the disarmament, a senior State Department official said Tuesday.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the United States was "deeply concerned" about the possibility that Cambodia might use its atomic weapons to threaten its neighbors or to use them in a conflict with Thailand or Laos.

Challenges to bans on handguns begin

WASHINGTON, April 9 (AP) — A coalition of gun rights groups filed a lawsuit Tuesday in federal court to challenge a new federal law that bans the sale of handguns to minors.

The lawsuit, filed by the National Rifle Association and the American Firearms Association, challenges the constitutionality of the law, which was signed by President Clinton last week.

The law, known as the Handgun Safety Act, bans the sale of handguns to minors and requires that all handguns sold in the United States be equipped with a safety device that prevents the gun from being fired unless the trigger is pulled.

Obama Clinton make 1st joint appearance

WASHINGTON, April 9 (AP) — Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama made their first joint public appearance Tuesday at a news conference in Washington.

The couple, who are both members of the Democratic Party, were seen together for the first time since their wedding in October 1995.

Clinton, who is the first woman to be elected to the U.S. Senate, and Obama, who is a member of the U.S. House of Representatives, were both seen at the news conference, which was held at the White House.

Zimbabwe court sides with opposition slams Zanu

Harare, April 9 (AP) — A Zimbabwean court Tuesday ruled in favor of the opposition in a case that could lead to the resignation of President Robert Mugabe.

The court, which is part of the Zimbabwean judiciary, ruled that the government had violated the constitution by refusing to allow the opposition to participate in the upcoming general elections.

The ruling is a significant victory for the opposition, which has been demanding Mugabe's resignation for several years. The opposition claims that Mugabe has been in power for too long and that he has been using force to suppress dissent.

'Tanglad' goes mainstream, yields essential oils

By J. P. Martinez

MANILA (AP) — The Philippine government is looking for ways to boost the country's economy by promoting the use of local products, and one of the most promising is the use of essential oils from the Tanglad plant.

Philippine government is looking for ways to boost the country's economy by promoting the use of local products, and one of the most promising is the use of essential oils from the Tanglad plant.

The Tanglad plant is a member of the mint family and is found in the Philippines, Indonesia, and Malaysia. It is a perennial plant that grows up to 1.5 meters tall and has a strong, pungent odor.

The plant is used in traditional medicine for various ailments, including fever, headache, and stomachache. It is also used in the production of essential oils, which are used in perfumes, soaps, and other personal care products.
